From Pope Benedict XVI's Catechesis on St. Paul (August 27, 2008):

The third missionary journey (cf. Acts 18: 23-21: 16), began, like all his journeys, in Antioch, which had become the original core of the Church of the Gentiles, of the mission to the Gentiles, and was also the place where the term "Christian" was coined. It was here, St Luke tells us, that Jesus' followers were called "Christians" for the first time. From Antioch Paul started out for Ephesus, the capital of the Province of Asia where he stayed two years, carrying out a ministry whose fruitful effects were felt throughout the region. It was from Ephesus that Paul wrote the Letters to the Thessalonians and the Corinthians. The population of the town, however, was set against him by the local silversmiths, who saw their income diminishing with the reduction in the number of those who worshipped Artemis (the temple dedicated to her in Ephesus, the Artemision, was one of the seven wonders of the ancient world); Paul was thus forced to flee north. He crossed Macedonia once again and went back to Greece, probably to Corinth, where he remained for three months and wrote his famous Letter to the Romans.

From here he retraced his steps: he went back through Macedonia, reaching Troas by boat, and then, staying very briefly on the islands of Mitylene, Chios and Samos, arrived at Miletus where he delivered an important discourse to the elders of the Church of Ephesus, outlining a portrait of a true Pastor of the Church (cf. Acts 20). From here he set sail for Tyre from whence he came to Caesarea Marittima, on his return journey to Jerusalem. Here he was arrested on the basis of a misunderstanding. Certain Jews had mistaken other Jews of Greek origin for Gentiles, whom Paul had taken into the temple precinct reserved for Israelites. He was spared the inevitable death sentence by the intervention of the Roman tribune on guard in the Temple area (cf. Acts 21: 27-36); this happened while the imperial Procurator in Judea was Antonius Felix. After a spell in prison (the duration of which is debated), and since Paul as a Roman citizen was an appellee of Caesar (at that time Nero), the subsequent Procurator, Porcius Festus, sent him to Rome under military escort.

De la catequesis del Papa Benedicto XVI sobre San Pablo (27 de agosto de 2008):

El tercer viaje misionero (cf. Hch 18, 23-21,16) comenzó como siempre en Antioquía, que se había convertido en el punto de origen de la Iglesia de los paganos, de la misión a los paganos, y era el lugar en el que nació el término "cristianos". Como nos dice san Lucas, allí por primera vez los seguidores de Jesús fueron llamados "cristianos". Desde allí san Pablo se fue directamente a Éfeso, capital de la provincia de Asia, donde permaneció dos años, desempeñando un ministerio que tuvo fecundos resultados en la región. Desde Éfeso escribió las cartas a los Tesalonicenses y a los Corintios. Sin embargo, la población de la ciudad fue instigada contra él por los plateros locales, cuyos ingresos disminuían a causa de la reducción del culto a Artemisia (el templo dedicado a ella en Éfeso, el Artemision, era una de las siete maravillas del mundo antiguo); por eso, san Pablo tuvo que huir hacia el norte. Volvió a atravesar Macedonia, descendió de nuevo a Grecia, probablemente a Corinto, permaneciendo allí tres meses y escribiendo la famosa Carta a los Romanos.

Desde allí volvió sobre sus pasos: regresó a Macedonia, llegó en barco a Tróade y, después, tocando apenas las islas de Mitilene, Quíos y Samos, llegó a Mileto, donde pronunció un importante discurso a los ancianos de la Iglesia de Éfeso, ofreciendo un retrato del auténtico pastor de la Iglesia (cf. Hch 20). Desde allí volvió a zapar en un barco de vela hacia Tiro; llegó a Cesarea Marítima y subió una vez más a Jerusalén. Allí fue arrestado a causa de un malentendido: algunos judíos habían confundido con paganos a otros judíos de origen griego, introducidos por san Pablo en el área del templo reservada a los israelitas. La condena a muerte, prevista en estos casos, se le evitó gracias a la intervención del tribuno romano de guardia en el área del templo (cf. Hch 21, 27-36); esto tuvo lugar mientras en Judea era procurador imperial Antonio Félix. Tras un período en la cárcel (sobre cuya duración no hay acuerdo), dado que, por ser ciudadano romano, había apelado al César (que entonces era Nerón), el procurador sucesivo, Porcio Festo, lo envió a Roma con una custodia militar.
